ABOUT GDPR

GDPR, or the General Data Protection Regulation is a new set of EU regulations set to come into force, as a replacement to the existing Data Protection Act. It is the rules and regulations for personal data protection, and every organisation within the EU must comply. The new single data protection act will make major changes to all of Europe's privacy laws and will replace the outdated Data Protection Directive from 1995.

The GDPR regulates the collection and usage of personal data of a data subject. The personal data has to belong to a living, identified or identifiable natural person. This means that the GDPR does not apply to deceased persons or to non-natural persons (e.g., corporations).

It also means that the person must be either identified or capable of being identified, directly or indirectly, by reference to an identification number or one or more factors specific to that person.

DATA PROCESSING TERMS DEFINITIONS

"Controller" means the entity which determines the purposes and means of the Processing of Personal Data. In this case, ESTRO.
